

As a paying listener of XM radio, I think the listeners should decide what we want to hear. We are paying for the service. I find the traffic and weather services very useful. I drive over 120 miles a day on 4 to 5 different freeways, depending on traffic. XM traffic is always at my fingertips. Regular AM/FM radio just can't cut it. Too many commercials, jabbering DJ's and politics going on. I use my XM traffic every day and my drive has become less frustrating and more relaxing knowing which routes to take. The NAB should not be allowed to take this service from the paying public. The FCC should have enough sense to see this.
